

For the most part there are no significant differences between using OperaGx (my main browser) and a more traditional browser such as Google Chrome. However due to my different monitors I have noticed the colors are much more saturated on my WestingHouse monitor compared to my Samsung one. This however is not a problem with the website but rather the color accuracy between monitors.